Chiang Government Scores Points in Suit Against 2 Officers

The Chinese Nationalist Government late yesterday won several rounds in District Court in its complicated suit against two of its former procurement officers, one of whose present whereabouts is unknown.

Judge James W. Morris ruled in favor of the Nationalists on several motions, after hearing arguments by William E. Leahy, counsel for the Chiang Kai-shek Government, and by Attorney Warren Woods, counsel for the two former procurement officers.

The Chiang government seeks an accounting from the two former procurement officers, Lt. Gen. P. T. Mow and Col. V. S. Hsiang and recovery of $7 million.

Meanwhile, it developed that Gen. Mow's present whereabouts is unknown to his attorney, Mr. Woods. Mr. Woods told the court he discovered last month that Gen. Mow probably was in Texas and later learned he was in Mexico, where the attorney saw him.

Mr. Woods further told the court he had urged Gen. Mow to return to the United States, but he said the general expressed reluctance to return. Mr. Woods added that the Chinese Ambassador to the United States, Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo, had ordered Gen. Mow to return to Formosa.

Of the several motions ruled on, Judge Morris decided generally in favor of the plaintiff, the Chiang government, with certain limitations.

On a motion to strike Gen. Mow's pleading in connection with the suit and to enter a default judgment against the general because he failed to appear for a deposition, Judge Morris held a final ruling in abeyance. The judge ruled, however, that Gen. Mow must appear within 10 days or show good reason why he cannot appear by that time, or he will grant a default judgment.

Another motion, made in behalf of the plaintiff, was to require Col. Hsiang to answer certain questions which the court was told he refused to do on January 9 when counsel for the plaintiff sought to take a deposition. Judge Morris said he would order Col. Hsiang to answer questions.

Judge Morris also granted the request of Chiang's counsel that Gen. Mow and Col. Hsiang be required to turn over additional records to William P. McCracken, previously named by the court as custodian of books and records.

Furthermore, Judge Morris ruled that officials from four Washington banks can be required by the plaintiff to bring in records and accounts of the two former procurement officers, if they have such records. Judge Morris held, however, that the bank officers should not be required to produce records pertaining strictly to the two officers' private accounts. No date has been set for trial of the suit.
